Clinical pathways are evidence-based protocols that help oncologists pick the most appropriate course of treatment for an individual cancer patient. They take into consideration all the different treatment options available and narrow them down into a succinct list of choices that drive the most value, which is simply defined as the best possible outcome at the lowest cost.

How Oncology Practices Can Use Clinical Pathways for Value

You have probably heard about the Guided Pathways work at BC. We have been working on the Guided Pathways project (we're calling it "Renegade Roadmap" at BC) since January 2014, beginning with documenting our Ed Plans in DegreeWorks, building student support services, creating C-ID and Transfer degree curriculum, and implementing a strategic outreach and intake program funded by SSSP.
