A Primer dimer (PD) is a potential by-product in PCR, a common biotechnological method. As its name implies, a PD consists of primer molecules that have attached to each other because of strings of complementary bases in the primers. As a result, the DNA polymerase amplifies the PD, leading to competition for PCR reagents, thus potentially inhibiting amplification of the DNA sequence targeted ...

Detection theory or signal detection theory is a means to measure the ability to differentiate between information-bearing patterns (called stimulus in living organisms, signal in machines) and random patterns that distract from the information (called noise, consisting of background stimuli and random activity of the detection machine and of the nervous system of the operator).

Abstract. Signal detection theory (SDT) may be applied to any area of psychology in which two different types of stimuli must be discriminated. We describe several of these areas and the advantages that can be realized through the application of SDT.

3.0 Isothermal nucleic acids detection with amplification Despite the great advances that have been made in detecting nucleic acids in vitro or in vivo with MB probes or –hold• probes, the sensitivity issue associated with non-amplifiable detection strategies has necessitated the development of other isothermal strategies that either amplify the initial target analyte or signal.

Lightning detection is of paramount importance whenever thunderstorms are present. Lightning detectors have become increasingly sophisticated, providing an added margin of safety for both people and property, but are still far from perfect. Lightning detection equipment varies widely in methods used to detect lightning. We offer an overview of lightning detection equipment from the National ...
